DR. G. HAROLD ETTINGER

A native of Kingston, Ontario, Dr. Ettinger obtained his B.A. at Queen's in biology and chemistry in 1916, and immediately became a research assistant in the Department of Physical Chemistry for Dr. L. F. Goodwin. In the fall of 1916 he entered the Faculty of Medicine, continuing his work with Dr. Goodwin as well that winter. The following three years he demonstrated in physiology along with his studying, and in 1917 and 1918 he also served with the R.C.A.M.C. He graduated with the medal in physiology and numerous other academic awards in 1920.

Following graduation he was appointed lecturer in the Department of Physiology. His postgraduate work included a period at the University of Chicago and later at the University of Edinburgh. In 1929 Dr. Ettinger was appointed assistant professor of physiology and lecturer in embryology. From 1931 to 1935 he was on loan to the Banting and Best Department of Medical Research at the University of Toronto as a research associate. He returned to Queen's as a full-time member of staff in 1935 with the rank of associate professor of physiology.

During World War Two Dr. Ettinger had a distinguished record as a medical scientist, working on problems of importance to the war effort, as well as continuing his teaching duties.

Shortly before the outbreak of war Dr. Ettinger had been invited to join the Associate Committee on Medical Research of the National Research Council, a committee of which Dr. Frederick Banting was the chairman. He served as honorary secretary of this committee, as well as a member and officer of several subcommittees. PYRRHUS, King of Epirus, won a victory which cost him the flower of his army — “one more such victory and we are lost” he cried — hence a Pyrrhic victory. If anyone prides himself that “no insurance man has ever sold me anything” — his victory also will prove to be like that of Pyrrhus.

The Old Man and his Sons

An old man was worried because his sons were constantly quarrelling. One day he asked each one in turn to break a bundle of sticks tied together by cord. No one could. Then the father gave each son a single stick. "Now try," he said. Each son broke his stick with the greatest of ease. "See, my sons," he said, "the power that is in unity. Alone you will surely fail."

The principle of life insurance is based on unity and strength in numbers. Greetings to All Women Graduates of Queen's!

Opposite this page is the notice and programme for the FIFTIETH ANNUAL MEETING of the Queen's University Alumnae Association. Actually the Alumnae Association came into existence in 1900 and the 50th Anniversary was celebrated at Queen's at a residential weekend May 19 - 21, 1950. In 1960 another Residential weekend was held on the opening of Chown Hall in which the women of Queen's have a great personal interest. Good things usually come in threes — it is said — so we are anticipating the return to campus of a great many women graduates on May 25, 1962. This will be a wonderful opportunity not only to meet fellow graduates but to see the facilities now provided for the students.

You will be interested in knowing that we expect to complete the Marty Memorial Scholarship contributions this year so that the income account will ensure a $2000. annual scholarship. To do so means that donations to the Alumni Fund should be designated for the Marty Scholarship. We have refurnished the Ban Righ Reception room and plans for other projects await the approval of those attending the Annual Meeting.

Other interesting items of business are on the agenda, such as more representation of women on University Boards. All will not be business as there will be ample time for fun and frolic.

Hoping to see you on May 25, 1962.

LORIMER JOHN AUSTIN

"Blimey" Austin
Has Become a Legend
To Queen's Medical Students

A Good Doctor
A Good Teacher
And a Good Friend

by W. A. Jones

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This article is printed with the kind permission of the "Canadian Journal of Surgery" and of the author, Dr. W. A. Jones, emeritus professor of radiology at Queen's.

THIS is the story of a warm-hearted, generous, tolerant man, sometime Professor of Surgery at Queen's University. It is about a man whose name has become a legend to medical students at Queen's. It is an attempt to recreate, in part at least, a controversial personality who in one way or another affected the lives of many hundreds of Queen's medical students over a period of nearly a quarter of a century. It is not the story of a scientist, a researcher or an author but rather that of a good doctor, a good teacher and a good friend.

Lorimer John Austin was an able man, an excellent teacher with a great gift for imparting knowledge, and for his day and generation an accomplished surgeon.

He was a salty character, and not only was he earthy, he was very down to earth in his opinions of men and their customs. There was nothing ethereal about "Blimey." He lived his life as he saw fit and cared not a whit for the conventions.

John Austin was in some ways like the comic-paper characters in "Pogo." You were either very fond of him or unable to understand him. He had a multitude of friends, and one feels sure that he never had a real enemy. His students were extremely fond of him, as he was fond of them. Some owed their very university existence to him, for in those days (which included the great financial depression) when scholarships and bursaries were few, and when no paternal government helped to finance a student, Blimey was often the source of those dollars needed to bridge the gap of financial disaster which threatened to separate them from the completion of their medical course.

Just who first called him Blimey is now forgotten, but it is of course easy to understand why he received the nickname. Arriving from England just after the close of the First Great War, and finding the medical classes filled with veterans of the war, how could he have escaped it? At any rate the name stuck. It was a well-deserved token of affection and, blimey, if he didn't wear it with equanimity and fortitude all the rest of the days of his life! At The London Hospital in former days he was suitably and affectionately known as "Tubby."

There too he is fondly remembered. Mr. Montagu Jupe, F.R.C.S., late radiologist-in-chief of The London Hospital, writes, "He was quite a bit senior to me, for I was a very junior house surgeon when he was registrar. We juniors were, all of us, very fond of Tubby. He was a most likeable man, always cheerful, always even-tempered and, to the young, extremely kind and helpful. When one got into a difficulty, which of course we all did, we would sneak off to Tubby to get a line on whether we had been stupid and how best to proceed. He always helped, and one's morale always improved after a few words with him. I was always struck by the fact that whatever time it was and whatever one called on him to do there was never the slightest indication that it was troublesome. Another thing was that he did not seem to tire and was always exactly the same after three or four emergency operations as he was before he started. His surgical opinion was excellent and the patients upon whom he operated did very well, which after all is the great test. My memory is of a very kind, humane, even-tempered man, who was extremely good company and who was a great help and support to us juniors."

He was born in London, Eng., on September 20, 1880, son of Mr. Justice James Valentine Austin and Annie Lorimer Austin. His sister, Margaret Austin, states that the birth took place in the home. The obstetrician came clad in a black frock-coat, which he presumably wore during the delivery. Austin's mother was ill for three months thereafter. He was raised in Bristol and educated at Clifton College, Bristol. His sister states that he studied Greek at the age of ten and could read the Greek Testament at eleven years of age. He attended the same college that Oliver Cromwell attended, the Sidney Sussex College at Cambridge, attaining the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1903. He graduated Bachelor of Medicine in 1906 and in 1908 was awarded the degree of Master of Arts and Master of Surgery. Later he passed the examinations and became a Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons of England.

After qualifying he served as a house surgeon and later as a registrar in The London Hospital. He was already an accomplished surgeon when August 4, 1914, ushered in the First Great War. Instead of joining the Royal Army Medical Corps he decided to throw in his lot with the British Red Cross. He did this because he thought that he could get into the midst of action more quickly and make use of the surgery for which he had been so well trained. Time was to show that he indeed did get quickly into the midst of things and his book My Experiences as a German Prisoner tells of his adventures. He and a Dr. Elliott were the first British prisoners-of-war. He had very little to do in the way of surgery but he did learn a good deal about the Germans. Curiously enough his book, while quite interesting is a very factual statement of his adventures as a prisoner. Austin had to talk really to tell a story, and those of us who were fortunate enough to listen to him got a much more vivid and enlightening account of his experiences than he ever committed to print. Indeed, this was one of the outstanding characteristics of this man. He never kept notes and seldom made notes, but inside that wonderful head of his he had everything tabulated and ready to offer at a minute's notice. All of the fascinating talks that he gave on historical subjects and all of the many practical and instructive lectures that he gave to his students, which flowed from him so stimulatingly and entertainingly, he could turn on and off as though turning the switch for a current of electricity. The information was always there ready to be revealed and no reference notes were required.

Austin was released by the Germans in 1915 and went to England on sick leave. He then returned to France as a Major in the Royal Army Medical Corps. He served the rest of the war as a surgeon at No. 2 Officers' Hospital, Rouen Base. He returned to The London Hospital after the war, and in 1920 he came to Canada to join the Faculty of Medicine of Queen's University as Professor of Surgery. Almost at once he became extremely popular with the students and with his fellow members of the faculty. Indeed, ever since the advent of Austin, whenever two or three Queen's graduates of the years-between-the-wars get together, the name of Blimey inevitably crops up, and many are the stories told, and many are the words of appreciation of this remarkable man. "Good old Blimey, do you remember when"—"The last time I saw him"—"What a guy, there'll never be another like him." One day in the Kingston General Hospital, he suddenly roared for Willis, his intern. "I say, Willis, are you a sailah? Are any of the interns sailahs? I've got to have a sailah. I've joined the yacht club. They've given me a boat, I don't know what kind of boat, but it's entered in a race and I've got to have a sailah." The record does not tell whether he won the race. For many years yet to come, Blimey will be one of the biggest conversation pieces of the medical alumni gatherings of Queen's.

Austin was one of the nearly extinct species of people known affectionately on the University campus as "characters." It is said of him, that at a Principal's reception in Grant Hall, he and an Arts Faculty professor (a character in his own right) were found to be solemnly discussing, deplored and regretting the fact that universities no longer produced characters.

When Austin arrived in Canada he made a real job of becoming a Canadian. As a surgeon, he soon got over the stumbling block of being called "Doctor" instead of "Mister." He adopted Canadian habits rapidly and took part in many extra-campus activities. He was a past president of the Kingston Kiwanis Club, a past president of the Cataraqui Golf and Country Club, a past president of the St. George's Society, a past master of Queen's Masonic Lodge and a member of the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry.

He lectured far and wide throughout Canada and the United States on surgical subjects. Lectures by Austin on historical personages and their times were looked forward to by all of us. He could make characters and events real and vivid. As a professor of history he would have been well in the van. Some of his most popular addresses were: The Knights of Malta; King John; The Lives and Deaths of the Kings of France; The First Appearance of Syphilis in Europe; Medicine in the Eighteenth Century as shown in Hogarth's Prints; and Napoleon. While lecturing to students on surgery, he would finish driving a point well home. Then suddenly he would take off his coat, roll up his sleeves, sit down and say, "Now let's talk about something interesting," and away he would go. One of his students well remembers such a talk on lues, the bad leg of Henry VIII, and the many abortions of his many wives. Then he expounded on the relationship of lues to the history of the establishment of the Church of England.

It might be of interest to present-day residents in hospitals to know that for three years Blimey received for his services as surgical registrar the sum of £100 ($280) a year along with "bed, board and washing." Some of his former students might also be interested in learning that when Blimey was on the hospital "midwifery service" in the slums of London, he often had nothing to wrap around the new-born babe but a newspaper. Some wag once said it was "The Daily Cry."

Austin never married and seemed almost a misogynist, but he was extremely fond of children. This fondness he demonstrated not only by his kindness and interest in them in the hospital wards but in his interest in children's activities generally (he loved to play Santa Claus at Christmas), and his well-concealed charitable help to the less-fortunate ones. In these charitable works Austin was ably seconded by his sister Margaret, one of the kindest of women, with a personality all her own. It is said of her that she is the only woman in the world who can walk down the street holding two dogs on a leash, knit a sweater, read a book (all at the same time) and know all that is going on around her as well. She is almost as well known as her brother. The two of them took many a student into their home to help him on his way through University, and Austin kept himself poor helping others. His sister says, "He was rich one month, poor the next, and he never spent a cent on himself. He wouldn't dare tell me how much money he gave to others to help them along." Just before he died he gave a cheque to the Red Cross, and said "You had better cash it right away, I won't be here in ten days."

Once after Austin had been away for a few days he found his dog in the pound. He had to pay a fine. As Austin described it, his dog was prosecuted for conduct unbecoming to a dog and a pure-bred in a public place, or words to that effect. Austin's actual words were earthy and short, but more revealing.

Austin was called once into consultation on a small boy with appendicitis. He went into the room and after making a few faces at the small fry he examined the boy and confirmed the diagnosis. Coming out of the room he encountered the frantic and distracted mother. He speedily reassured the poor woman by saying "It's all right, mothah, your little lad has appendicitis. We shall take him up to the operating room and poison him, fall upon him and cut him open. We will fix him up for you."

Dr. Austin as a British Red Cross surgeon in 1914. He was the first British prisoner-of-war and wrote a book about his experiences.

At an examination Austin showed a gastroenterostomy clamp to a promising young student and asked what it was. Quick as a flash the bright boy replied, "A J-R clamp." "What for?" asked Blimey, "An elephant?"

Austin was a very informal dresser and cared little for appearances, but he could look smart in a dinner jacket or military uniform. A military uniform seemed to suit him well and he wore it often as the Officer Commanding No. 1 Field Ambulance. Lt.-Col. Austin also served with Queen's Officers Training Corps for years. His most informal dress was the one he wore when playing golf, and he cut quite a characteristic figure on the course. He also had a very much educated slice on his drive, which had the merit of being always consistent. It would veer far, far to the left and finally land right in the middle of the fairway at least 100 yards from the tee. Despite this amazing slice, however, he usually managed to down his younger and more vigorous opponents and turned in quite a satisfactory score. He was of course a most companionable and entertaining member of any foursome. He was an ardent bridge-player and a great collector of stamps. On his death his stamp collection and the property, in which he and his sister had lived and in which they had fathered and mothered many a student, passed to the University. The faded old red brick house, containing Blimey's famous study, has lately been torn down and part of the new Dunning Hall now stands on the site.

In the year 1929 a young girl received a chest injury in an accident. Austin opened the thorax to remove a quantity of blood from the pleural sac. Before closing the wound completely he had the girl brought out of the anaesthetic, allowing her to cough and re-expand the lung. This was before the time that positive pressure anaesthesia was in common use. This brought about an unusual sequel. The case went to court for litigation regarding the accident. During the trial Mr. Justice Logie remarked that it was unusual to congratulate a surgeon upon his skill while the court was in session but he could not lose the opportunity of expressing the warm appreciation felt by the public for the excellent work Dr. Austin was doing. This rather astonishing eulogy is possibly one reason why Austin thereafter revelled in the atmosphere of the court-room, sometimes to the confusion of members of the legal profession who were cross-examining him.

Besides his fellowship of the Royal College of Surgeons of England, Austin was also a fellow of the Royal Society of Medicine and of the Hunterian Society. On this side of the Atlantic he was made a fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons of Canada and of the American College of Surgeons. He helped to organize the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada, and was for some years a member of the council of that body. He was a past president of the Ontario Medical Association.

His war and other military medals were: The Cross of an Officer of the Order of St. John; the 1914 Star; the British General Service Medal; the Victory Medal; the King George VI Jubilee Medal, and the Canadian Efficiency Decoration.

On May 14, 1944, Dr. Austin received the Montreal Medal for "meritorious contribution to the honour of Queen's."

Mention was made "of the deep affection in which Dr. Austin is held not only by medical graduates, but by all who knew him on the football field and at Queen's student and alumni gatherings" and that the award was a sincere tribute from Queen's people to one who had given twenty-five years of generous service to the University.

It is now seventeen years since March 20, 1945, when this man died, but his memory lives on.

Dr. James Miller, his contemporary in the chair of pathology at Queen's, writing about Austin after his death, paid tribute to his ability, described him as a kind and most unostentatious man, with a great capacity for living, and, with reference to his death, quoted the famous lines of Robert Louis Stevenson, Requiem, Stanza I:

Glad did I live and gladly die,
And I laid me down with a will.

Many students will forever remember the blackboard and the chalk, and his inimitable method of imparting knowledge, nor can they forget these oft-repeated aphorisms. "The patient must be adequately exposed." "The reason God gave you two arms and two legs was to enable you to have good ones to compare with the injured ones." Many a student who owes his career to Austin will remember him with gratitude. His friends, with the memory of the warm-hearted, generous, kindly man whom they once knew, say, "It is good to have known him."

Three weeks before Austin's death, when in Belgium with the Canadian Army, the author received a letter from him. Blimey wrote, "I am very ill, I shall not be here when you return. So just turn down an empty glass.

The first draft of this article has been written at sea, on the Eastern Arctic Patrol 1961. Here, on the edge of the Arctic Circle, Dr. J. D. Hermann, who

Dr. Austin as a sailor in a Christmas skit at the London Hospital where he was a house surgeon was a former student of Dr. Austin and has just retired as professor of clinical surgery of the Faculty of Medicine of the University of Ottawa, and the writer, a former colleague of John Austin, are at this moment looking at the photographs of Blimey destined to illustrate this story. How happy we would be if he were here with us. We have just turned down an empty glass.

Toronto Award Presented To Dr. L. W. Brockington, Rector

This year the Toronto Award was presented to Dr. L. W. Brockington, Rector of Queen's, at a dinner held at the Granite Club February 21. Dr. Brockington was chosen as recipient of the award in recognition of his unprecedented five three-year terms in office as Rector and of the esteem and respect in which he is held by students and graduates. There were 200 in attendance.

The presentation was made by W. R. Richmond, president of the branch, and Dr. Brockington was introduced by N. MacL. Rogers, Arts '43. The Rector gave an inspiring talk as he recounted anecdotes of experience during his tenure of office at Queen's and during his fifty years in Canada. He said that Queen's had led in tolerance in a country which has been among the first in the world to recognize it, and he painted a bright picture of Canada as a "nation of the future."

In addition to the official telegrams of congratulations which were sent to the chairman of the banquet, including those from Hon. L. B. Pearson, leader of the Liberal Party, and Prof. and Mrs. E. J. Pratt, private messages were received by Dr. Brockington from Hon. Arnold Heeney, Canadian Ambassador to the United States; Dean and Mrs. A. R. C. Duncan, Queen's University; the Hon. Mr. Justice Felix Frankfurter, of the U.S. Supreme Court; and Edward R. Murrow, U.S. Information Agency, Washington, D.C.

The speaker was thanked by Mrs. Lilyan Wiley, Arts '15, president of the Toronto alumnae. Mrs. Wiley also presented a bouquet of flowers to Mrs. Brockington.

A reception was held prior to the dinner, which permitted the out-of-town guests to visit with the Rector and others to renew old acquaintances. At the dinner, Grace was said by Rev. A. M. Laverty, University Chaplain. A toast to the University was proposed by Hon. J. M. Macdonnell, M.P., and reply was made by Dr. J. A. Corry, Principal of the University.

Present in a body were the members of the first graduating class in Law at Queen's, the Class of '60. Other guests introduced were Dr. Yousuf Karsh and Dr. Healey Willan.

Vice-Chancellor W. A. Mackintosh Visits Vancouver Alumni

The visit of Dr. W. A. Mackintosh, Vice-Chancellor of Queen's, to Vancouver in connection with the Royal Commission sessions on finance and banking provided an opportunity for the alumni to meet and to be brought up to date on news of Queen's.

In the business portion of the meeting Hugh A. Elliott, Sc. '34, was elected president of the branch for the ensuing year. Mr. Elliott succeeds H. O. Bulmer, Arts '27, Sc. '29.

Also elected were: first vice-president, Dr. A. J. Tripp, Med. '16; second vice-president, D. E. Finlayson, Sc. '46; third vice-president, Miss Barbara Macfarlane, Arts '54; secretary, Miss Joan Hill, Arts '54; treasurer, M. W. Harshaw, Sc. '32; directors—W. J. Burgon, Com. '46, Mrs. Alexander Campbell (Margaret Sheir), Arts '41, Mrs. T. M. Howard (Dorothy Redeker), Arts '40, K. E. LaChance, Sc. '49, A. A. Wilson, Sc. '33, D. A. Sloan, Sc. '41, Dr. M. L. Edgar, Sc. '38, Med. '43, H. A. Ross, Arts '39, G. S. Bowell, Arts '41.

Develop Aircraft Float

Singled Out for Distinction

As Invention

Of the Month

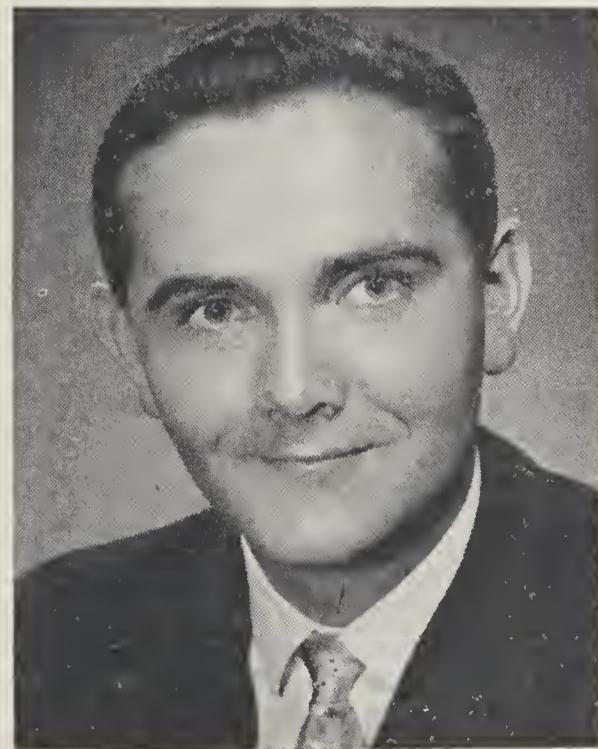

● Singled out for distinction as the "Invention of the Month" by the Canadian Research Development Foundation, a type of aircraft float with many improved factors of safety, construction, and efficiency has been developed by three members of the Class of Science '60 — D. G. Hilliard, T. R. Beamish, and J. E. Barker.

By utilization of special structural members and fabric skin the float is unsinkable, owing to the fact that the interior is filled with a cellular foam comprising an extremely large number of independent watertight cavities. A stressed but flexible outer skin adds to the strength of the framework and protects the foam, also contributing to the water-tightness of the float. Because of its construction the float may be quickly and easily repaired by unskilled personnel should it sustain any damage. The repair kit takes up a minimum amount of space.

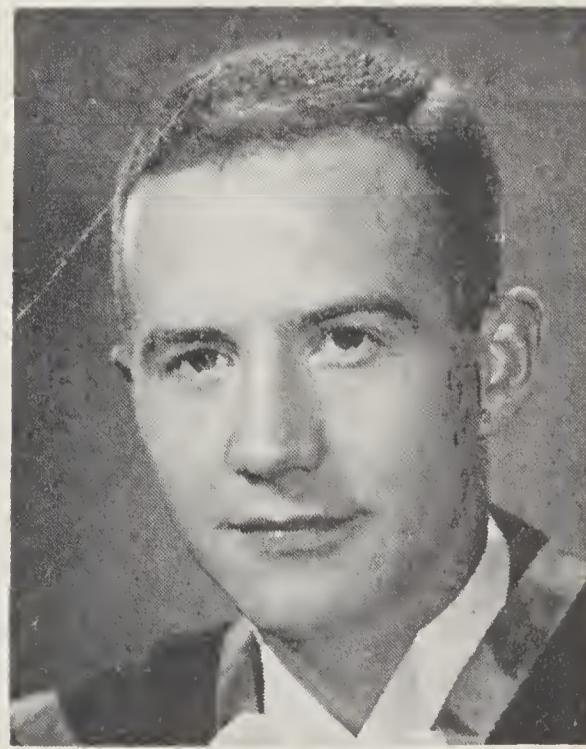

The inventors claim that even in the event of a float being punctured or damaged maximum buoyancy is maintained, reports Canadian Business. No highly specialized skills are required in the construction of the float and the assembly does not require rivetting. A further claim is that it will absorb all landing shocks through a centre girder and may, if necessary, allow the aircraft to light upon an airfield and, under normal landing circumstances, not sustain damage to the floats.

PYRRHUS, King of Epirus, won a victory which cost him the flower of his army — “one more such victory and we are lost” he cried — hence a Pyrrhic victory. If anyone prides himself that “no insurance man has ever sold me anything” — his victory also will prove to be like that of Pyrrhus.

AUTOMATIC ELECTRIC are well known as suppliers of telephone, communications and control equipment to many different segments of Canadian industry. At Brockville, Ontario, and at Lethbridge, Alberta, where their Canadian plants are located, they are looked upon as major factors in the local economies.

But the ramifications go much further than that. AUTOMATIC ELECTRIC is the original member of a group of leading manufacturing companies engaged in almost world wide operations. All the companies are under the same ownership, and many of their names have been household words for decades—like SYLVANIA who manufacture lighting products, photolamps, TV sets, radio and TV tubes . . . or like ARGUS whose cameras and projectors are a sort of international currency.

Other companies in the group, well known in the communications field, include LEICH ELECTRIC, LENKURT ELECTRIC, and ELECTRONIC SECRETARY INDUSTRIES. AUTOMATIC ELECTRIC's connection with the closely interrelated companies makes available unrivalled research and technical and marketing facilities. It also gives AUTOMATIC ELECTRIC unusual advantages in the highly competitive markets of several continents.

Some 7,300 Ottawa Rough Riders football fans now see football games from a precast concrete stadium located on the south side of Lansdowne Park. The use of Canada High Early Strength Cement made it possible to cast and erect all precast concrete members required for the construction of this grandstand in less than six months. The new stadium was completed for the first exhibition game between the 1960 Grey Cup Champion Ottawa Rough Riders and Winnipeg Blue Bombers on July 20.

UPPER CANADA VILLAGE

Provincial Project Proves To Be
Outstanding Tourist Attraction

Queen's Students Are Prominent
On Summer Staff

by D. G. Dewar

The charm, serenity and at times excitement of life in Eastern Ontario during the middle years of the last century have been brought vividly to life in Upper Canada Village, a provincial project now in its second year of operation.

Situated ninety miles east of Kingston on the banks of the St. Lawrence River, the Village already has taken its place in educational circles as a prime teacher of the social history of pioneer Ontario, as well as a project of great recreational and entertainment value.

"Life in the Village is so realistic" visitors have attested "that you sense the physical presence of the original inhabitants of 100 years ago. You feel you have interrupted them at some task, at a meal, in the kitchen, or in the office. They seem to have just disappeared around the corner, or are even watching you from behind a curtain . . ."

This feat of achieving such realism is indeed a tribute to the devotion and skill of the architects of the project. One of the chief architects was Ronald L. Way, Queen's University Honours B.A. (History and English) 1935, and M.A. 1938. Mr. Way is Director of Historic Buildings and Sites under the Ontario-St. Lawrence Development Commission, while Mrs. Way is his Executive Assistant.

Upper Canada Village developed out of the inundation of eight Eastern Ontario communities by the Seaway, including a number of pioneer cemeteries. The late James Smart of Brockville proposed in 1954 that the headstones of these cemeteries and one or two historic buildings be saved to form a pioneer memorial.

The provincial government about this time established the Ontario-St. Lawrence Seaway Development Commission with Hon. George Challies as chairman. Mr. Smart's scheme was turned over to the Commission but he died before action was taken. The Commission developed the scope of Mr. Smart's idea and appointed Professor Anthony Adamson, Toronto architect, as a consultant. Professor Adamson proposed erection of a complete pioneer village dated about 1860. The Commission carried the idea to Premier Leslie M. Frost who saw the scheme as an outstanding tourist attraction.

As the project developed the Commission appointed Ronald L. Way, long-time director of Old Fort Henry at Kingston as Director, and Beryl W. Way, his talented and dynamic wife, as Executive Assistant to the Commission. Old Fort Henry in 1959 had been placed under the Commission's operation. The rest is history, which was made by the foresight, daring and indomitable courage of Ronald Way, and his efficient, hand-picked staff. The Village was opened to the public on June 24, 1961. The province had spent more than two million dollars on the project.

LUTHERAN CHURCH AND PARSONAGE are two of the many buildings featured at Upper Canada Village, near Morrisburg, Ont., which has been developed into an outstanding tourist attraction. A large number of the members of the summer staff are Queen's students.

SIGHT-SEEING VEHICLE drawn by two horses is a welcome aid to visitors who want to see all the sights at Upper Canada Village, rich in educational and entertainment value.

Upper Canada Village is a 65-acre tract — part of the 2,000-acre Crysler Farm Battlefield Park, a memorial to one of the decisive battles of the war of 1812.

Located eight miles east of Morrisburg, the Village has about forty buildings within its boundaries, each brought in as a unit, or in sections, from Eastern Ontario pioneer communities. In the Village are fifteen houses, two churches, two hotels and taverns, a general store, two schools, two water-powered mills turning out blankets and lumber, several farm buildings and a military installation.

In the words of the Commission's Master Plan:

The Village "is a living monument to the way of life of Upper Canada's earliest settlers by the relocation and restoration in their original condition of some of their first buildings"

A quick tour will give a few impressions of the Village. Entering at the 1840 toll gate, the visitor passes into the century-old world with its strange sights and sounds and aromas.

First on the left are two of the Village industries, consisting of the sawmill with piles of logs and lumber, and the red-hued Asselstine factory where woollen blankets are made from home-spun. The swishing of the tumbling waters is audible as the creek turns the factory wheels.

The sturdy wooden "A" bridge is enveloped in a delicious aroma of newly-baked bread from the outbuilding of Cook's Tavern, a red brick two-storey hostelry a few yards up the plank roadway. Almost instinctively the visitor enters the hostelry, as the four-horse carriage draws up with a clatter of hooves on the hard roadway.

Garbed in the quaint but attractive costumes of that day, the Tavern waitresses act as guides through the excellent dining room, the busy kitchen, the bar and the gracious ballroom, explaining the curious equipment and furnishings. The walls are a vivid blood red with blue-green trim. This bold use of colour in many of the buildings is explained by Mrs. Way as "a hunger for warmth and gaiety not found in the harsh struggle of the settler's life."

Further down the street — Church street — is the white wooden Christ Anglican Church, moved intact from the now-submerged hamlet of Moulinette; and the restored Lutheran pastor's home, built in 1843, and furnished with good taste.

From the site of Cook's Tavern, the panorama of the Village lies before the visitor. The street plan is in the form of an "E", with the perpendicular being Church street, the top arm Mill street with its craft houses, the central arm the King's Highway, and the lowest arm the dirt road bordering on the model canal and the river's brink. They are each one block apart.

Crossing Church street, the visitor enters the King's Highway or main street of the Village. Stretching for a half-mile ahead on the left side of the roadway is the line of buildings of the more well-to-do. On the right is the Military Reserve, a green belt that extends to the river.

This line of dwellings consists, in order, of the luxurious French-Robertson house with coach house, Crysler general store, Willard's Hotel, palatial Crysler Hall now used as a museum, the doctor's house, schoolmaster's house, the Louck stone house with hired man's dwelling and other agricultural buildings, and log cabins. The highway swings to the right (south) to Simcoe House, formerly occupied by Governor John Graves Simcoe, and the rugged timber block house.

On the northern fringe of the Village is Mill street, where are found the Providence church used by all denominations, the cabinet maker's and blacksmith's shops, the two crafts houses where women of the village weave, spin, braid and make rugs. Here also is the Glengarry log school, a replica of that described by Ralph Connor in his Glengarry novels.

The gardens are exactly as they were in the 1840's and 1860's. Tidy little gardens fenced in with pickets abound in nasturtiums, snapdragons, hollyhocks, verbena, stocks, bachelor buttons, morning glories, sunflowers and scarlet runners. The sweet perfume of mignonette fills the air, and lavender lilacs and yellow roses are abundant. Berry bushes and apple, pear and cherry trees are in almost every backyard. Potatoes, corn, turnips, carrots and peas represent the mainstay of the householders. Flowers and plants match the time period of the dwellings.

The sights, sounds and smells of the Village included the clatter of horses' hooves, the crackle of wood in the deep fire places, the pleasant odour of spices in cupboards and store, the grinding of coffee beans, the heavy odour of the oil lamps, the cheese-milk smell of the farm house, the showers of sparks in the blacksmith's shop and the clang of hammer on anvil, the rustle of the women's long skirts, the rattle of pewter dishes, the creaking of the oars on the bateau that used the canal and river, formerly the sound of firearms in hunting, and the music of square dances.

Mrs. D. W. Boucher, a member of the Board of Trustees at Queen's, and an outstanding horticulturist, directed the work in the choice of flowers and plants for the gardens in the Village.

Fourteen Queen's students have been on the Village staff this summer and all are enthusiastic in their comments on the Village life. All but one are Faculty of Arts students, and most live in the area contiguous to the Village.

Elaine Thompson, Kingston, is head girl on the store staff and Carole Wingard, Williamsburg, head girl of the attendant staff.

Others employed as attendants in early period costume from 1820 to 1835 are Helen Campbell, Ingleside; Kathryn Derby, Kingston; Kathryn Innes, Brantford; Elizabeth Marcellus, Iroquois; and Margaret Pugh, Belleville.

Employed as attendants in late period costume from 1845 to 1860 are: Anne Edwards, Morrisburg; Penny Long, Kingston; Sandra Robertson, Iroquois; and Nancy Jacob, Winchester.

June West, Picton, and Gloria Jamieson, Burlington, are employed on the store staff.

Anne Edwards, Morrisburg, is on sick leave, and Diane Simmons, Newboro, left during the summer to attend summer school at Queen's. Five of the girls have been on the summer staff since opening day on June 24, 1961.

Several of the girls gave their own impressions of Upper Canada Village:

CAROLE WINGARD: "My attitude towards the Village as a whole is that I am glad to have the opportunity to examine the early history of Upper Canada more closely in concrete detail and to attempt to help others understand this history, in preparation for my future career as a high school history teacher. Although many of my duties are administrative, I have the chance to circulate around the Village and talk with some very interesting and often quite helpful visitors. While working at the Village I have noticed the kitchen equipment in particular, and after seeing what the women of the early 1800's had to use in their routine domestic duties, it makes me realize how unskilled I am."

KATHRYN INNES: "Early morning is the best time of day at the Village, for it is then that one senses the presence of the inhabitants of a century ago. This 'living atmosphere', an elusive, magical thing, is for me the most exciting feature of the Village, and is the essence of its charm."

KATHRYN DERBY: "I enjoy my work at the Village thoroughly. The houses are fascinating, for we find something new each time we change buildings. The actual job, meeting people and talking to them, is extremely interesting and so much fun. I love the Village itself very much . . ."

KATHRYN DERBY inspects a beehive in a corner of the orchard, Pastor's garden.

MOLASSES COOKIES are made by Mrs. Willa Robinson, niece of the late Dr. I. G. Bogart, former professor in Queen's Medical Faculty.

NANCY JACOB: "Upper Canada Village is full of 'living history' — seen in the vivid detail of the homes and period costumes. It appeals to all the senses — the aroma of fresh bread, the clatter of stage coaches, the gay hues of the flowers. Working at the Village among antiques is unique in itself, stimulating the mind and offering valuable information to a student."

MARGARET PUGH: "I think that Upper Canada Village is a fascinating place and a credit to Ontario. I am delighted to have the opportunity to work here, and since my arrival I have come to appreciate the early crafts. Now I realize why some people are interested in antiques, and I hope my knowledge of them can expand."

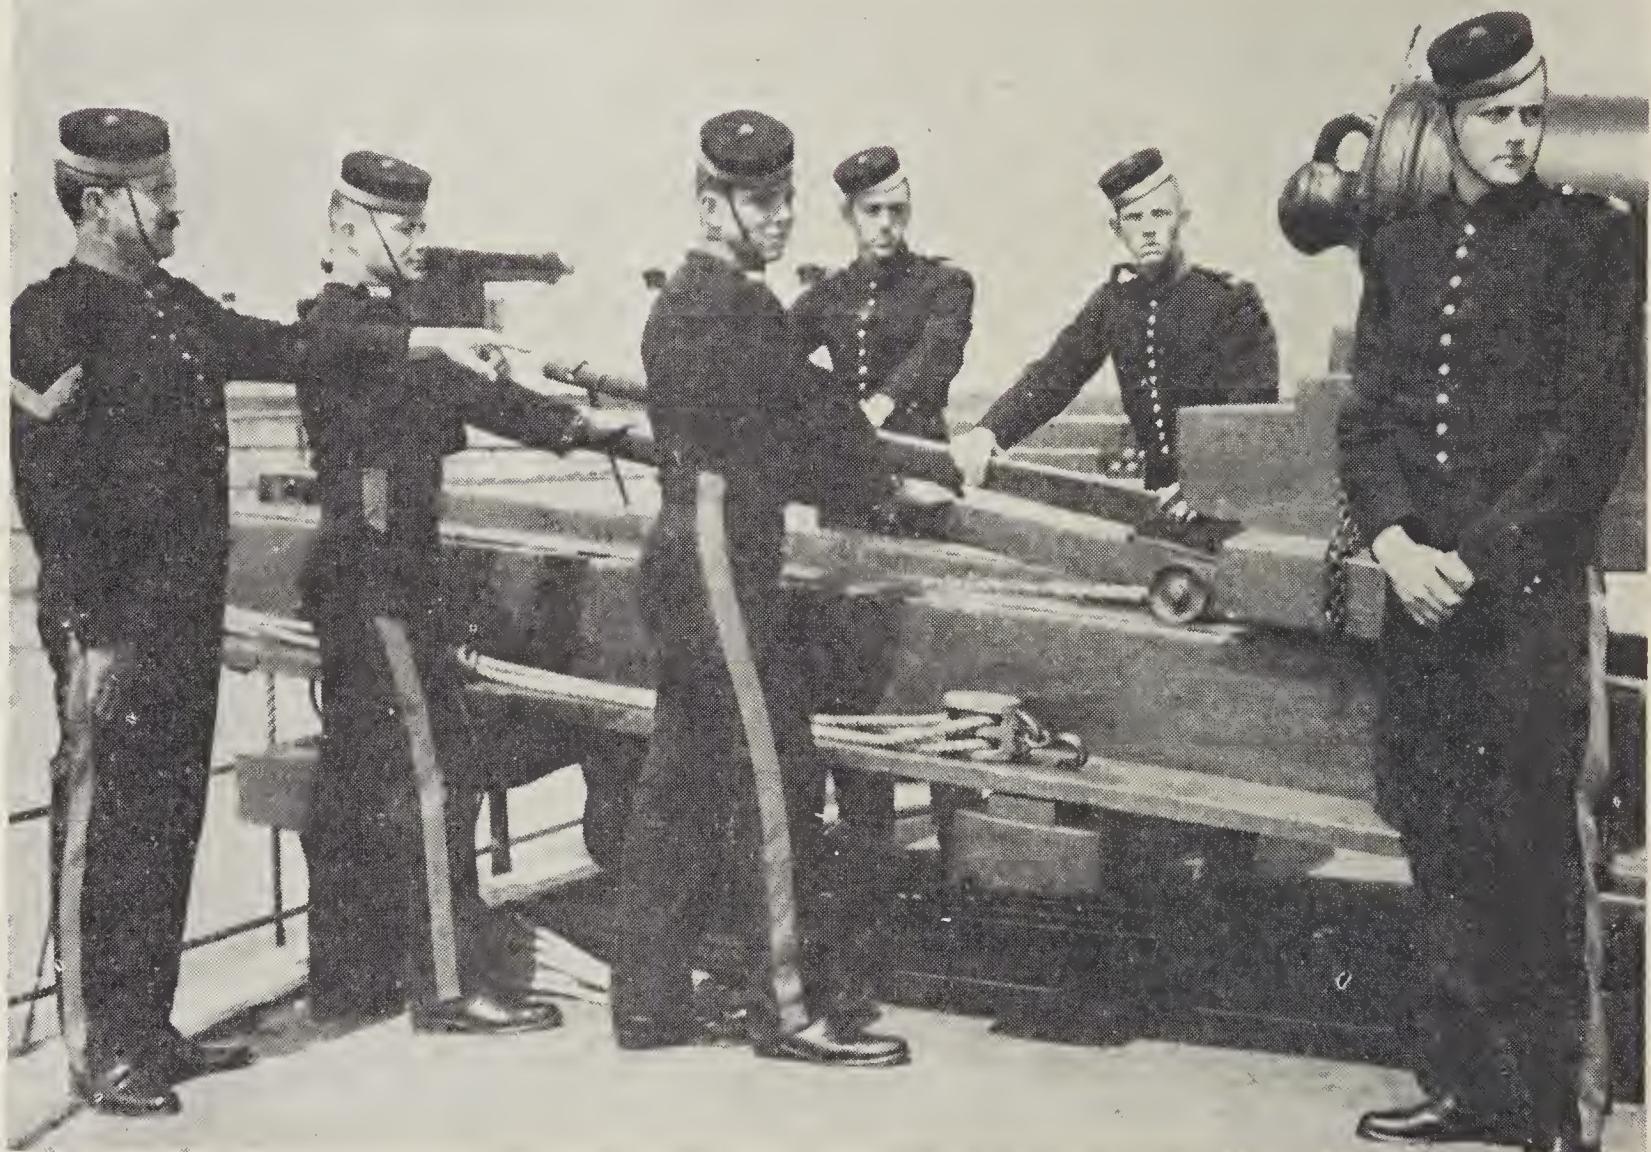

HELEN CAMPBELL: "Working at the Village has been a very interesting experience for me. During the summer I have met and spoken to travellers not only from Canada, but from many other countries of the world as well. I have heard their impressions of the Village and of Canada itself. I have begun to admire and respect the people who lived in these pioneer times. Many started out with nothing but by hard work and perseverance they soon had a comfortable home and a satisfactory livelihood. They had to make do with what they had and they did so very handily."

SANDRA ROBERTSON: "I enjoy working among antiques and it is rewarding to see the interest shown by the visitors."

To many visitors the serene, relaxing atmosphere of Upper Canada Village, where life moves along at a slower pace and there is time to enjoy the simple pleasures of life, is perhaps its greatest appeal.

Adjacent to the Village is the pioneer memorial, with three hundred tombstones mounted in its walls, paying silent tribute to scores of pioneer families who resided in Upper Canada during its early days. And the Crysler Farm Battle Park with its impressive Memorial Mound surmounted by an obelisk, honours the memory of the gallant men who fell in this decisive battle of the War of 1812.

Ronald L. Way is probably best known in his capacity as director of Old Fort Henry at Kingston, "The Citadel of Upper Canada." Begun in 1813, it was restored in 1936, and its mounted cannon, ramparts, parade ground and modern living quarters vividly portray Canada's military history.

It was for the protection of the Royal Navy Dockyard on Point Frederick, now the site of the Royal Military College, that Fort Henry first came into being, during the War of 1812. In 1832 it was rebuilt, a casemated redoubt, the main portion consisting of a pentagonal figure the three-sided front of which faced inland towards the north and completely covered the eastern approaches to Kingston from attack on the land side. The Fort constituted the first sector in a chain of fortifications planned for the protection of Kingston.

Although never attacked by an enemy, Fort Henry has not lacked for colourful incidents. It was the object of an abortive threat that never materialized, during Mackenzie's Rebellion of 1837; it was here that John Montgomery, a supporter of Mackenzie was imprisoned under sentence of death and it was from here that he made a spectacular escape. It was in the Fort that Von Schultz, another visionary deluded by Mackenzie's adherents, was imprisoned and subsequently hanged.

Fort Henry was a centre of military life for almost eight decades. Imperial troops were stationed there from 1813 to 1870, and native Canadian troops more or less regularly from 1871 to 1891.

BOOK OF ACHIEVEMENT

Latest names to be added to the City of Kingston's Book of Honourable Achievement, established in 1958, are those of Ronald L. Way, Arts '35, and Mrs. Way, in recognition of the work they have done in restoring Old Fort Henry and in developing Upper Canada Village. Also in the book are the names of the late Sir Frederick Carson, Arts '08, for his services to the British Commonwealth, and of Professor James Roy, a member of the English Department for thirty years, "in recognition of the high standard of scholarship exhibited in his book, 'Kingston, The King's Town'."

THREE QUEEN'S students on Fort Henry staff during the summer: Patricia McLeod, Heather Henderson, and Kerstie Vaino.

Victims of Kingston's small-pox epidemic of 1908 were quarantined in the Fort's casements, and German prisoners were interned there during two World Wars.

The importance of Kingston's defences dwindled with the gradual improvement of relations with the United States and with military developments. The Fort was allowed to fall into decay and by 1936 it had become a sprawling ruin, interesting but an eyesore. It was in that year that the work of restoration began, under a joint scheme sponsored by the Ontario and Dominion governments.

Since its restoration, Queen's students have played a large part in the activities of the fort and of the Fort Henry Guard during the summer season. The Guard has won an international reputation for the authenticity and precision of its performance, and as in other years, this summer sees many Queen's students members of this famous military group.

Commander of the Guard is Captain D. H. Thompson, a Queen's Arts graduate of 1955. Queen's students working in the Guard this summer include the following:

Officers and N.C.O.'s — Lieut. D. S. Skene, Stoney Creek; Ensign G. G. McNeely, Oakville; Sergeant Frank K. Tindall, Kingston; Sergeant J. C. Whetham, Kingston; L./Cpl. D. E. Kavener, Kingston; and L./Cpl. R. E. McBride, Belleville.

Drill Squad — I. W. Brady, Toronto; F. W. Danby, Kingston; G. R. Heyland, Timmins; J. C. Johnson, Kingston; J. W. Judson, Kingston; I. A. MacDonald, Ottawa; E. M. Penton, Montreal; L. J. Rasmussen, Ottawa; and J. B. Stevenson, Kingston.

Fort Henry Band — D. D. Andress, Westport; J. D. Couch, Toronto; W. A. Murphy, Smiths Falls; J. D. Parsons, Ottawa; W. W. Rosser, Ottawa; W. F. Skitch, Port Hope; J. B. Skitch, Port Hope; K. F. Stewart, London; and D. T. Taylor, Port Hope.

Levana members — Heather Henderson, Kerstie Vaino, Patricia McLeod, and Elizabeth Batstone, all of Kingston, and Eleanor Banbury, Brighton.

Can Gaels Retain Championship?

Team Riddled
By Graduation
And Other Losses

Coach Frank Tindall
Faces Major Job
Of Rebuilding

● Queen's Golden Gaels, expected to face a major rebuilding job because of the loss of eight players through graduation, were further riddled when the examination results were announced this spring. Down to defeat to the faculty went such men as Marshall Nicholishen, a fine rookie quarterback, Larry Burridge, an outstanding rookie fullback who played first string, Bob Good, a husky fullback from Oregon, Derek Mackesy, speedy and experienced wingback from Duke University. Also lost to the team through injuries received last year are Kent Plumley, Pete Wityk and Frank Tindall, Jr., all-star end.

Added to the graduating members — Gary Strickler, John Erickson, Gary Lumenti, Larry Dolecki, George Bethune, Wayne McGill, Mike Pettit, and Norm Dunstan — these losses will riddle last year's championship team. And that's not all. Cal Conner, voted the all-star quarterback and most valuable player in the league, is a bit of a question mark. However, last reports had him headed back to Queen's and a course in Medicine.

The defensive unit, one of the most powerful to represent Queen's, is completely demolished. There is still plenty of power on the offensive unit, particularly if Robin Ritchie, the league's high scorer two years ago, plays this year. He is registered in law, but could not play in 1961 because of a three-minute appearance in professional football with the Ottawa Rough Riders.

Queen's no longer has an intermediate team to draw on, but replacements will be sought from among the Hamburger Squad, which gave the senior team its practice competition last year. In addition, perhaps there will be some good prospects in the new crop of freshmen, as there was in 1961. Coach Frank Tindall will be meeting all trains and buses from this point on.

Under the circumstances it would seem logical to install McGill as the team to beat this year, because the Redmen are reputed to have added a number of experienced players. Western and Toronto are expected to show marked improvement. All of which indicates an interesting season ahead although Coach Tindall might have some reservations about how interesting it will be.

THE NEW LOOK

40 per cent
Increase in Buildings
In Past Ten Years

Building Programme
To Continue
For Some Years

During the past few years so many buildings have been erected on the Queen's campus that even graduates of the most recent vintage find something new has been added since their last visit.

In the decade 1951-61, when Dr. W. A. Mackintosh was Principal and Vice-Chancellor, there was a 40 per cent increase in building space. As the Principal's Report for 1955-56 noted: "This arises primarily from three circumstances: First, the advance of knowledge, teaching methods and particularly of scientific methods and equipment coupled with necessarily meagre building programmes from 1930-50 makes it necessary that in a number of fields we must provide additional and thoroughly up-to-date space for various departments if we are to maintain and improve our standing as a University. Secondly, the increasing number of students and the much greater prospective increase requires that in doing this, we would provide also for these increased numbers. Thirdly, we have reached the stage in Kingston when an increasing proportion of students must be provided with residence accommodation for the traditional lodging house, if not disappearing, is certainly declining."

The next decade may not see as frenzied a building programme, but already promises to make a substantial contribution. For example, the new Physics Building now under construction will be the largest on the campus and is being erected at a cost of about $3,500,000. The building programme budget for 1962-63 is an estimated $2,439,000, allocated as follows: Physics Building, $1,757,000; Gordon Hall, Frost Wing (Chemistry), $86,000; Richardson Laboratory (Pathology), $146,000; Ellis Hall (Civil Engineering), $30,000; Agnes Etherington Art Centre Extension, $124,000; other, including property purchases, $296,000.

Plans under consideration by the Board of Trustees include an addition to Fleming Hall (Electrical Engineering), an extension of the Douglas Library, an addition to Clark Hall (Technical Supplies), a fourth men's residence, and an addition to the Students' Memorial Union. Also scheduled for the not-too-distant future is a badly needed new biology building. The students have a project of their own, a theatre, for which they are raising funds.

With all the new construction and the expansion of the campus it is interesting to note that the old landmarks remain, with two exceptions—the two historic wooden buildings, the Mining Mill and the Mechanical Laboratory, have been demolished, and in their place are two fine limestone buildings. Otherwise, the heart of the campus remains the same as the older graduates remember it.

The building programme of the 1951-61 decade started modestly enough with the official opening on November 10, 1951, of Clark Hall, named in honour of

NEW BUILDINGS on the campus are shown above: (1) Physiology; (2) W. T. Connell Wing of the Kingston General Hospital; (3) Richardson Labs; (4) Etherington Hall; (5) Gordon Hall extension; (6) Frost Wing — chemistry; (7) Nicol Hall extension; (8) McLaughlin Hall extension; (9) Etherington Art Centre; (10) Ellis Hall; (11) Richardson Hall; (12) Dunning Hall; (13) Sir John A. Macdonald Hall; (14) Chown Hall; (15) Morris Hall; (16) McNeill House; (17) Leonard Hall; (18) New physics building which is under construction.

Dr. A. L. Clark, one-time Dean of the Faculty of Applied Science. This building, housing the students' bookstore and the Engineering Society clubrooms, was a gift of the Engineering Society to the University. It was built on the site of the Old Mill, one of the two old wooden buildings mentioned above.

Richardson Hall, designed for administration, was opened in 1954. Situated on the west side of University Avenue, diagonally opposite the library, the building is "an impressive three-storey edifice of silver grey Queenston limestone." It was named in honour of the late James A. Richardson, who served as Chancellor of Queen's 1929-39.

The Principal's Report for that year said about Richardson Hall: "It meets a long-felt want in that the Collins Room provides a meeting-place of beauty and dignity for the Board of Trustees, the Council, the Senate, and the Faculty Boards. By bringing together the administrative offices the new building has facilitated the work of administration which each year grows more complex . . . It is fittingly named for a Chancellor of great vision and ardent loyalty."

One of the greater merits of Richardson Hall is that it released much-needed space for the library. The reconstruction of some parts of the interior of the library was undertaken that same year. In the intervening years the Library demands for space have increased to the point where it once again warrants a high priority on the building programme.

The first of the men's residences was opened in time for the session 1955-56. It was named in honour of Dr. W. E. McNeill, a devoted servant of the University for forty-six years, and who was at that time Vice-Principal Emeritus. The House accommodates 186 students, with 75 double rooms and 36 single rooms.

This was the first of a series of residences to be built on Leonard Field, which lies two blocks west of the main campus and fronts on Lake Ontario. Graduates of an older era will remember the spot as a popular location for freshmen initiations and weiner roasts and the like. In the Principal's Report credit was given to Dr. J. A. Corry, then Vice-Principal, Professor Arthur Jackson, and Dr. John Orr "for their unremitting and imaginative work" in planning this unit.

It was at this time that the Board of Trustees retained the services of a landscape architect to recommend the best locations and to report on land acquisition and planning for the future. "The University grounds now display character, tradition, and some beauty. It is important that, at a time when new buildings are being added, every care should be taken to enhance these without sacrificing the convenience and suitability of buildings for their purposes."

The Physiology Building on Arch Street, which runs along the present eastern edge boundary of the campus, was completed and equipped in 1957. At the official opening on October 12 Dr. Mackintosh said that the building reflected the faith and foresight of the graduates of the Medical School and all who were responsible for its erection. He singled out as one of the men who had made this project possible, Mr. Harry Abramsky, prominent Kingston merchant, who had contributed $200,000. Gratitude was also expressed to the Federal Government which had contributed the research equipment. As a result the Physiology Building provided the University with a modernly equipped building for teaching and research in a basic medical science. Rearrangement of space in other buildings was a useful by-product—the space vacated in the Medical Laboratories Building was fitted up into elegant laboratories for public health and preventive medicine; the entire Old Medical Building now became available for teaching and research in anatomy.

Named in honour of the late Dr. Frederick Etherington, a member of the staff of Queen's from 1907 to 1943 and Dean of the Faculty of Medicine for fourteen years, Etherington Hall, the University Hospital Building on Stuart Street, next to the Richardson Laboratories, was opened in the fall of 1958 for classes. The research laboratories were not completely equipped at that time, but were available soon afterwards, as were the offices for clinical medicine.

Two other buildings were completed during the 1958-59 session: Ellis Hall, next to Richardson Hall on University Avenue for civil engineering and Morris Hall, a residence on Leonard Field for men. The former, named in honour of D. S. Ellis, a member of staff for forty-five years, and Dean of the Faculty of Applied Science from 1943 to 1955, contained a much-needed auditorium for general use. The residence bore the name of the Hon. William Morris, the first chairman of the Board of Trustees of the University, 1840-42.

The session 1959-60 was the period of the most spectacular expansion during the decade when three new large buildings were put into use. Leonard Hall, named in honour of Colonel R. W. Leonard, who gave the University the field on which the men's residences stand, is the largest of three units. It provides accommodation for 230 men, and contains the dining room for the use of all male students in residence. Dunning Hall, on the corner of Union Street and University Avenue, honours the late Chancellor C. A. Dunning. It provided quarters for the Departments of Political and Economic Science, and Industrial Relations, the School of Business, the Institute of Local Government and temporary quarters for the Department of Geography. It boasts a large auditorium classroom.

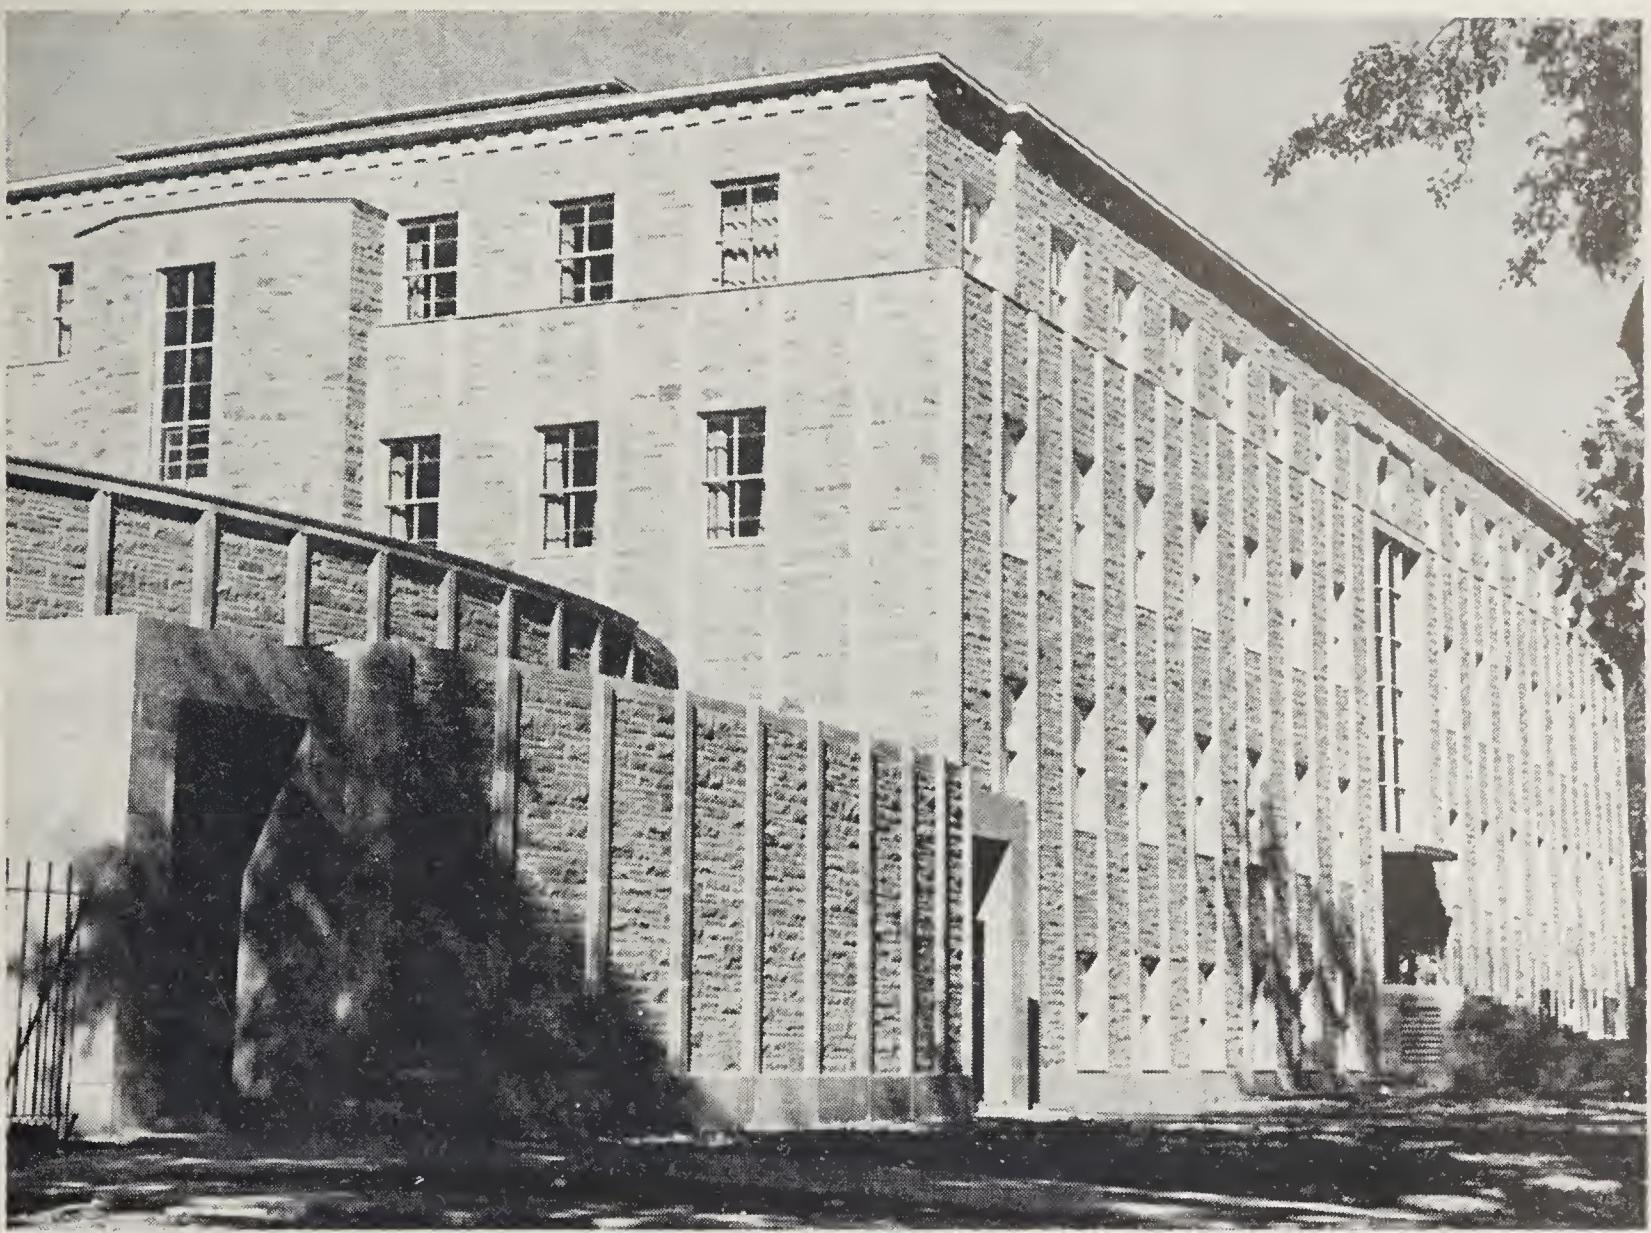

The third building was a new women's residence, with 165 beds. Said the Principal's Report: "On the recommendation of the Alumnae Association, the Board of Trustees named this building Chown Hall in honour of Miss May Chown. Miss Chown was one of the notable and devoted group of women who initiated the building of Ban Righ Hall. For many years she was the thrifty and resourceful treasurer of the Ban Right Hall Board which provided the initial resources for Adelaide Hall. . . . In honouring Miss Chown, we also honour all those women who, over many years, have worked so loyally and effectively to provide residences for women."

In addition, the Gymnasium was extensively renovated and some new space added. The basement of Carruthers Hall was fitted as a broadcasting studio for Radio Station CFRC. "Under the direction of Mrs. Angus, and in its new and well-appointed quarters, the Radio Station is once more a credit to the University."

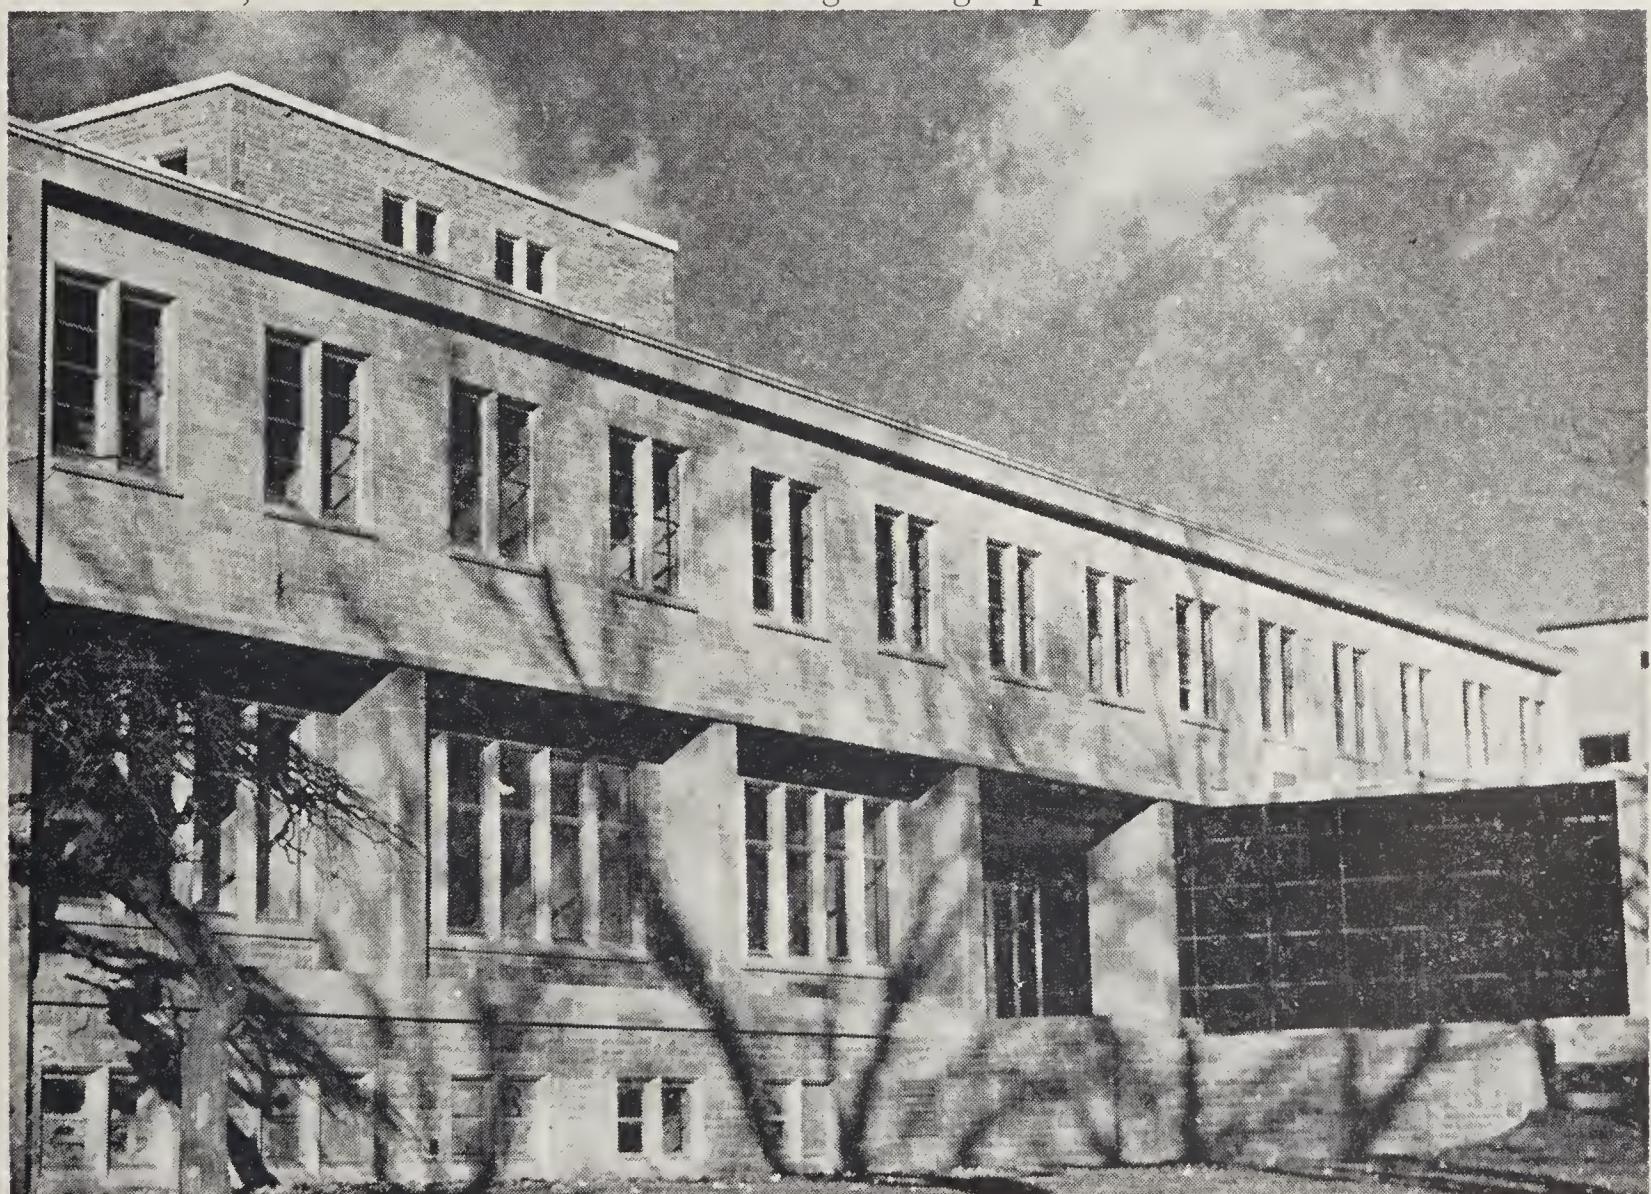

In 1960-61 the new Law Building, consisting of a library and a lecture-room wing, was opened and ready for occupancy in the fall of 1960. It was fittingly named by the Board of Trustees Sir John A. Macdonald Hall in memory of the most distinguished lawyer in Kingston's history and a warm and helpful friend of the University.

Three floors of Carruthers Hall were refitted for the Mathematics Department. The Old Gymnasium, vacated by the hydraulic engineers, was renovated and a storey added. It houses the maintenance shops in the basement and the Department of Drawing on the other floors.

The dining room and kitchens of Ban Righ Hall were substantially enlarged to serve all the women students in the residences and annexes. The installation of a new telescope, contributed by the Atkinson Foundation, in the Observatory of Ellis Hall, completed the equipment of this valuable teaching research unit.

In summing up the building programme for the ten years he was in office, Dr. Mackintosh said, in part: "The decade has been crowded with construction projects from which every division of the University has benefited either by acquiring new space or inheriting space vacated by other uses . . . A major objective has been the provision of greatly increased residence accommodation. This is an essential need not merely because of the increase in student numbers but because growth and change in the City of Kingston have reduced available student accommodation and, even more important, because there are special educational and social values in students sharing to the fullest extent in university residential life.

"At the beginning of the decade, Ban Righ Hall and its annexes provided accommodation for about 200 women. There was no residence accommodation for men. At present, with the addition of Adelaide Hall and Chown Hall and the continuation of a number of annexes, we have residence space for about 450 women and ample provision for meals for many more. The erection of McNeill House, Morris Hall, and Leonard Hall on the Leonard Field have provided rooms and meals for 600 men. As resources become available, a fourth men's residence must be undertaken and doubtless in the future more accommodation for women will be needed. . . .

"Though it is not a new building, the bequest of the late Mrs. Etherington of her house as accommodation for the Agnes Etherington Art Centre has tremendously improved the provision for art and has had a marked influence on students and the community."

The impetus of the building programme still carries on. In his report to the Trustees this year Principal J. A. Corry noted that four new additions to existing buildings have been completed.

"At the beginning of September the extension to McLaughlin Hall was ready, the latest of many gifts for which Queen's must thank Colonel R. S. McLaughlin. The addition to Nicol Hall became available in the fall of 1961 and the new wing to the chemistry building in February, 1962 . . . The addition to the Richardson Laboratories was completed and put into service in January, 1962."

Dr. Corry noted the addition of new galleries to the Etherington Art Centre. These are being brought into service officially during the latter part of this month (October) when an Art and Musical Festival has been scheduled. The Festival includes art exhibitions and musical concerts.

"We have already turned to the next stages of the building programme. The preliminary calculations for a new Biology Building have been made and detailed planning will go forward in the coming session. The need of the Department of Biology for new quarters is extreme because of the crowding in the present building and the continued rapid increase in the number of students taking biology. However, it is no greater than the need for an extension to the Douglas Library where crowding due to the great increase in students in the Faculty of Arts and Science is already severe. Some consideration has already been given to the requirements of additional library space and it is hoped that work on this extension will begin in 1963."

Football Season Opens

● Some outstanding rookies and the return of Quarterback Cal Connor to last year's all-star form have bolstered the senior football team to the point where it can make a determined bid to retain the championship won in 1961.

Queen's won the first game with Toronto 32-13, picking up nineteen points in the fourth quarter. The Tricolour also won against Western in Kingston the following week, this time by 26-9. In pre-season games the Gaels defeated Loyola 34-3, and Verdum Sham-Cats 38-10.

These scores indicate that the Golden Gaels have a lot of power. They will need it, for the Intercollegiate competition is very evenly balanced this year and any team appears capable of defeating any other.

Against Varsity in Toronto the Gaels offensive could not get untracked because the stubborn Blues contested every inch of gridiron space, and it was not until the fourth quarter that they were able to pull away. The turning point was an 82-yard dash down the sidelines to pay-dirt by Bayne Norrie. Other Queen's touchdowns were scored by Robin Ritchie (two), Jim Young, Gord Simester.

In the game with Western, Queen's rolled up a lead of 18-0 by half-time, on the strength of touchdowns by Bruce Stewart, Bill Edwards and a fieldgoal by Robin Ritchie. In the second half Western outscored Queen's 9-8, with the Gaels registering a T.D. by Jim Young and a convert and a single by Ritchie.

The veterans of the squad form a solid nucleus for this year's version of the Golden Gaels, but rookies have added a lot of the spark and drive. Jim Young, from Hamilton, is a hard-running full-back whose forte to date has been long gallops to touchdowns. Bayne Norrie is another fine back—he is the son of "Bozo" Norrie who starred with Queen's in the mid-twenties.

A full account of the season will appear in the next issue:

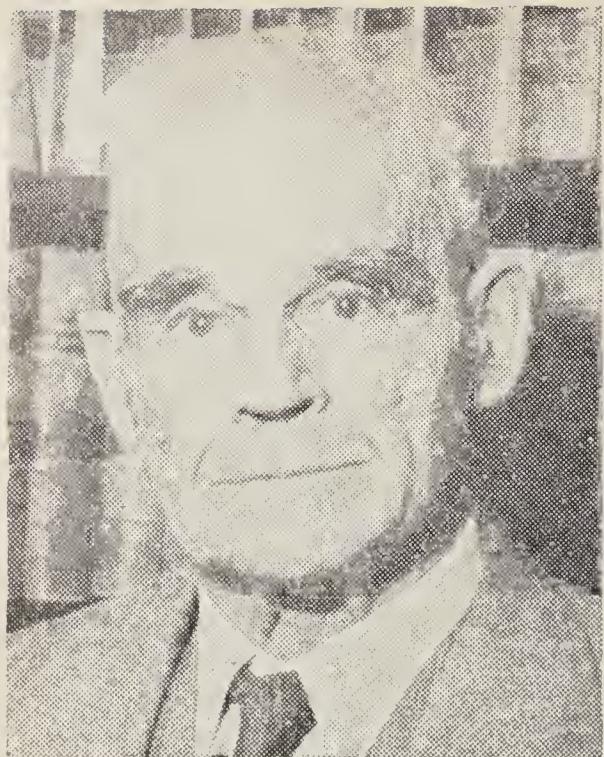

September 22 — Queen's 34, Loyola 3

September 29 — Queen's 38, Verdun 10

October 6 — Queen's 32, Toronto 13

October 13 — Queen's 26, Western 9

October 20 — McGill 38, Queen's 24

HIGHLAND HERITAGE. By Grace Campbell, Arts '15. Published by William Collins, London and Glasgow. Price $4.50.

Author of "Thorn-Apple Tree," "The Higher Hill," "Fresh Wind Blowing," "The Tower and the Town," and "Torbeg," Grace Campbell departs from fiction in this volume to give an account of journeyings made in Scotland in search of ancient clan domains and of meetings with some well-known Scots.

The history of the Highlands is a history of a proud and courageous people who lived and loved and died in times of violence. It is a story of dark deeds and of deeds of valour. Grace Campbell makes good use of her remarkable talent to note the unusual and the interesting:

● "It has been said that at the time of the Flood there were no MacLeans in the Ark. They had a boat of their own."

● "In the Tullibardine there is an especially intriguing item, a tartan bedspread two hundred years old which once covered an ancient circular bed on which the seventeen sons of Sir David Murray of Tullibardine used to sleep . . . What a sunburst those seventeen young Murrays must have made, feet to the centre, and a border of broad shoulders and boyish heads!"

In the names of the clans and of septs and dependents, there are some 2,000 surnames. The wildly poetic ring of these names precludes any comparison with the "Begat" section of the Old Testament, e.g., "Among the cadet branches were those of Achnahone, Ardsheal, Invernahyle, Ballachulish, Bohallie, and Fashnacloich."

The book will be of lively interest to all Scots and people of Scottish ancestry, who wish to know more about their forebears.

Meeting your needs through engineered quality

Today this simulator is a steel mill tomorrow it's a ship

It can also be a paper mill. Or a mine hoist. In fact, Canadian General Electric engineers can simulate just about any electrical system, and study its behavior under varying conditions. The advance knowledge that results enables them to "de-bug" before they build.

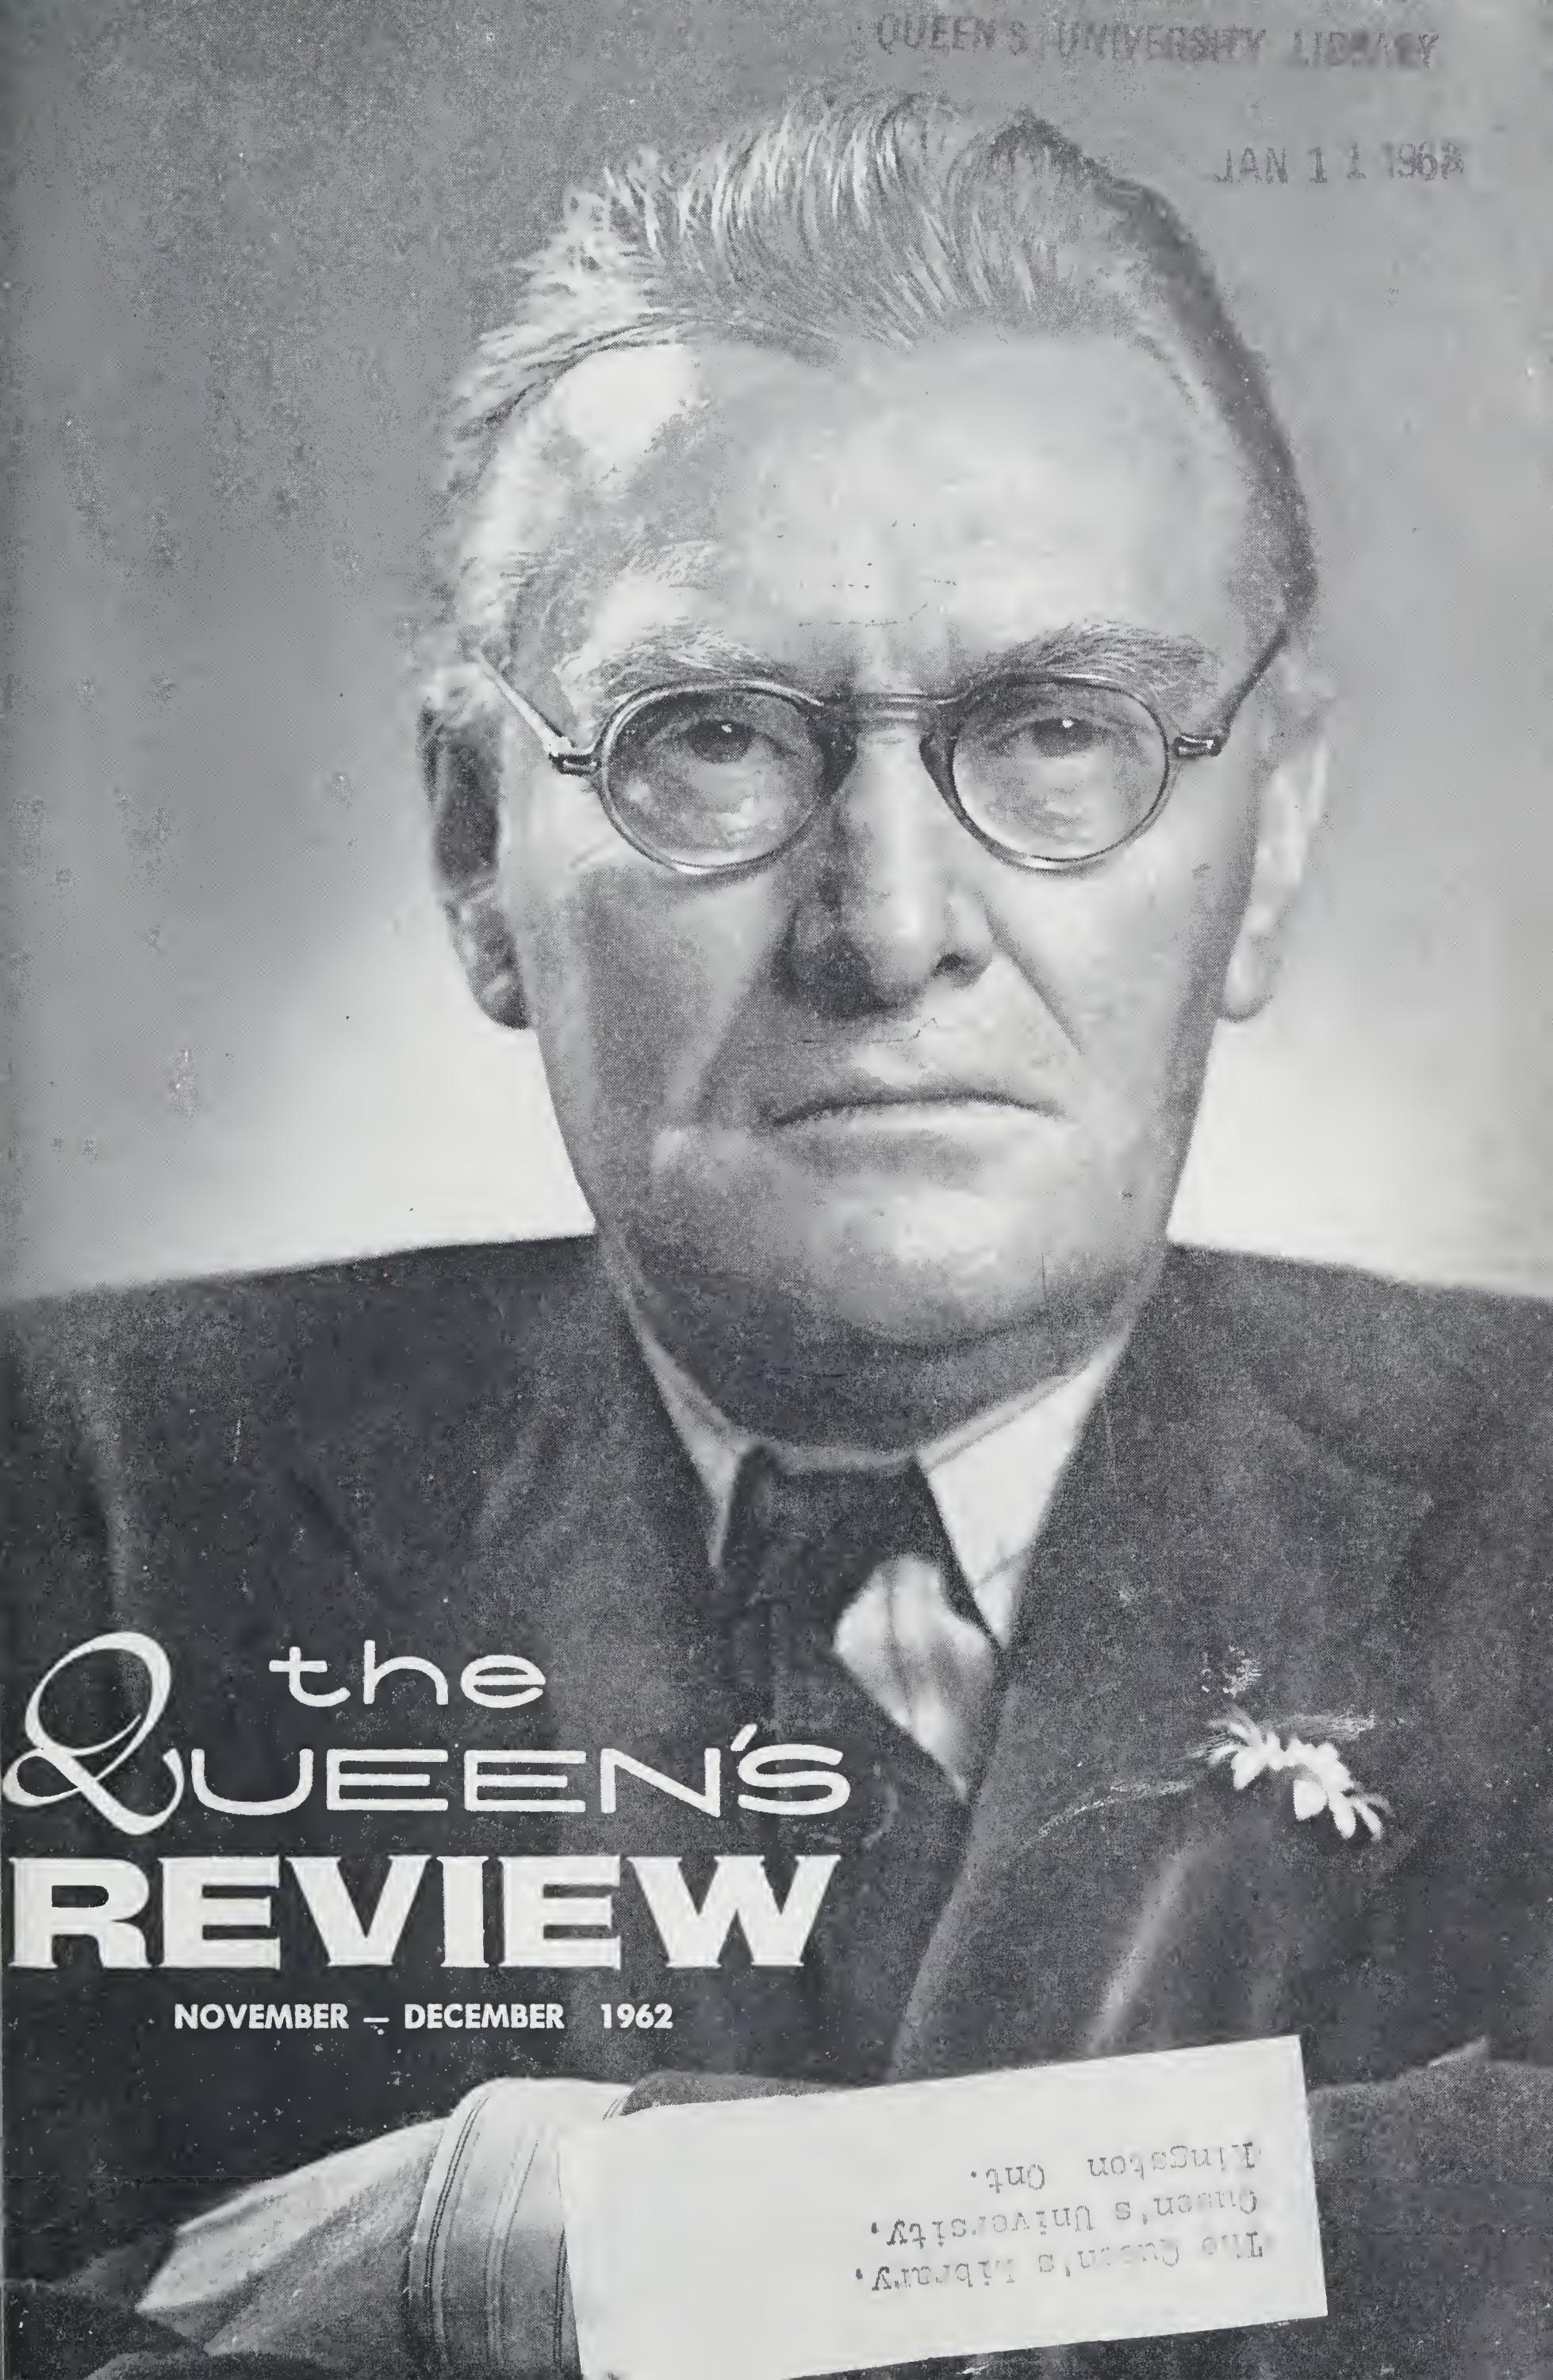

This means minimum delay and far fewer "teething problems" when equipment is actually put into service. Use of the simulator is an excellent example of CGE "engineered quality." Here, as in all CGE products and services the accent is on value.

Upwards of one thousand alumni travelled from all corners of the continent to be on hand for this year's Reunion on the weekend of October 27.

Classes officially scheduled for a reunion were those of 1912, 1914-15-16, 1932-33-34-35, 1937, 1951-52-53-54. In addition the Class of Arts '02 organized a special gathering to mark their sixtieth anniversary, and the Classes of Science '22 and Science '27 celebrated their fortieth and thirty-fifth anniversaries respectively. The Class of Science '62 held a special reunion on the weekend of November 10 which attracted more than one hundred members and their wives.

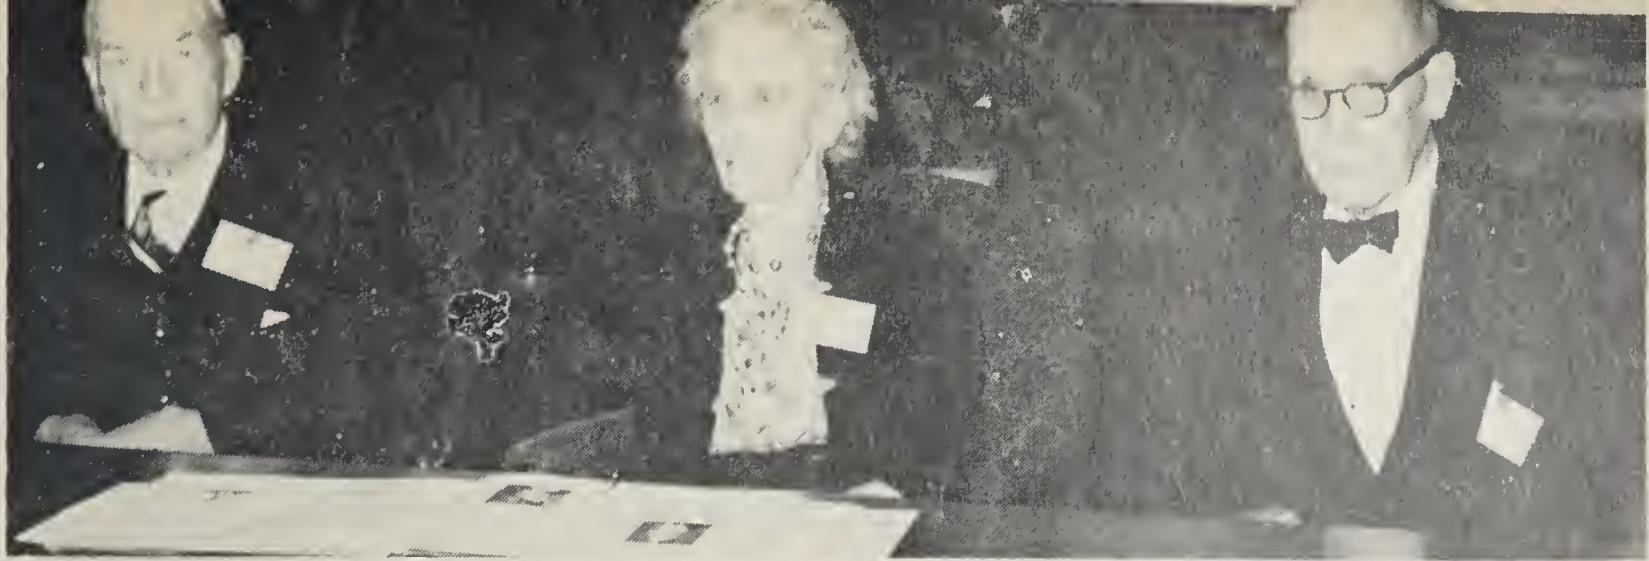

Seven members of the Class of Arts '02 turned up for the festivities, coming from such centres as Toronto, Ottawa, and Kingston, in Ontario; Vancouver,

They were presented with mementoes of the historic occasion, the women receiving sterling silver coffee spoons bearing the Queen's crest, and the men crested letter openers.

A Tribute

SIR EDWARD PEACOCK

by L. W. Brockington

SIR EDWARD PEACOCK

When the famous Earl of Birkenhead died, I remember reading in The Times of London how many of the great and famous men of Britain went to his funeral in the quiet, remote little English village where he lived. It was recorded that among the floral tributes none attracted more attention than a simple wreath with the following words and signature:

To a loyal heart homeward bound.
From
Bill, the Farmer's Boy.

Although there will probably be no memorial from a farmer's boy at the funeral of Sir Edward Peacock, I can think of no man for whom the words of this epitaph would be more fitting and just.

After a long sunset glowing with the gratitude, admiration and affection of all who knew him or had been honoured with the benediction of his unfailing kindness, his rich life of devoted public and private service has ended at the age of ninety-one.

Although he was a banker, he did most of his own banking in the hearts of his friends. He was born in the very Scottish heart of our land, the justly famous County of Glengarry. Many of its early settlers were Jacobites carrying with them memories of that ancestral loyalty which made clansmen follow their chieftains and their kindred and remembering that when 30,000 pieces of gold were offered for the betrayal of Charles Stuart no poor Highlander (and there were thousands possessing the knowledge and opportunity) made any known attempt at betrayal.

Sir Edward Peacock's mother was Highland Scottish on both sides of her family and his father on one side of his. I doubt whether any Canadian in our history ever had a more remarkable career than their son Edward.

Born in the manse, that traditional home of young men who have gone out into the world and made good by being good and doing good, he learned at his mother's knee the virtues of honesty, industry and self-reliance, and all those deep unspoken certainties of Scottish life.

Sir Edward Peacock, spurred on by his family's sacrificial passion for education, graduated from Queen's University with a gold medal and honours in English and political science. After many varied manual tasks, which he like so many young Canadians have performed in their youth to help them through university, he became in 1895 a teacher of English and subsequently a housemaster at Upper Canada College. There he remained until 1902.

From then on his path turned sharply and carried him into the business world of Canada, and shortly afterwards to Britain in the service of a Canadian financial corporation. His amazing history since his first journey to London long ago, although unobtrusive and rarely recorded, is a true fairy story almost as romantic as that of Dick Whittington.

During the sixty years of his domicile in Britain he always remained a Canadian in heart and in mind, and primarily in loyalty. He served as a trustee of Queen's University from 1912 to 1947. No Canadian who went to Britain and sought his help or advice was ever received with anything but courtesy and helpfulness or given other than wise and useful counsel. He returned to Canada every year and I recall his appearance five years ago at a dinner given to another great-hearted and vital nonagenarian (happily still with us), Samuel McLaughlin, on the occasion of what was then his eighty-fifth birthday.

This is not the place to record the many distinctions and honours which were showered upon Sir Edward in a lifetime so rich and varied. Everybody trusted him and relied upon his discretion, his integrity and his reflective wisdom. I read only today in Harold Nicolson's Life of George The Fifth four references to this great Canadian.

One expressed the gratitude of the author of the book to Sir Edward for his advice and help, and the other three referred to the remarkable work which he did in helping Britain and the King when Ramsay Macdonald and some of his Labour colleagues joined Stanley Baldwin in a coalition government.

During the last war he undertook the difficult task of the disposal and pledging of British securities in the United States to enable Winston Churchill's Britain to purchase the necessary munitions and supplies to fight the battle for freedom. He became the first Commonwealth Governor of the Bank of England, the president of Barings Bank, the manager of the estates of the Duchy of Cornwall and the affairs of the Duke of Windsor. He was financial adviser to many members of the Royal Family.

During his manifold activities he always found time to help Canadians in Britain. It was only a few weeks ago that I gave a Canadian professor of history a letter to him. The professor told me that although Sir Edward was on his deathbed he gave him most valuable help in his research among British historical records so necessary to the writing of the history of early Canadian days.

Sir Edward received one of the highest orders of chivalry in the personal and spontaneous gift of the Crown. He was a modest man of tall and distinguished appearance, who spoke with a soft voice and never at the top of his voice. Although he believed in financial stability as essential for the progress of both persons and people, he never showed or used ruthlessness, greed, or cunning in the pursuit of his own prosperity or the advancement of his own fortune. It is true that he never let his heart run away with his head, but it is equally true that he never allowed it to forget the claims of his unfailing humanity.

Although he moved behind many great scenes he was never an "eminence grise" or a sinister figure seeking self-advantage or power.

It was only this afternoon when another wise and modest gentleman, J. M. Macdonnell told me that Sir Edward Peacock (whom he knew for sixty years), in his early life consulted a doctor and with him planned and determined the number of hours each day which he was to spend on work

TYPICAL BIT of action in the play-off game. Ian Monteith (83) of McGill is stopped by the Queen's line. Visible are Gary West (33), Laird Rasmussen (76), Ian Brady (65), John Bowler (44), and John DiFederico (33). Queen's made 223 yards rushing, and McGill made 124 yards.

CLOSE, BUT NO CIGAR!

By the scant margin of fifty-nine seconds Queen's failed to retain the intercollegiate football championship. It was at that point in the playoff game with McGill, less than one minute to go, that the Redmen scored a touchdown to forge ahead 15-13.

The game was as close as the score would indicate. Queen's led 6-5 at the half, fell behind 8-6 in the third quarter, and took the lead again when Bill Sirman went over for a touchdown at the six-minute mark of the fourth quarter. Then, with less than three minutes to go and with the ball on their own seven-yard line, the Redmen started a drive that ended in paydirt on the strength of five pinpoint forward passes thrown by that long-standing Queen's nemesis, quarterback Tom Skypeck.

Even then Tricolour refused to give up. A Cal Connor - to - John Futa forward put the ball on the McGill 30-yard stripe from where a field goal attempt could have been made, but the final whistle sounded and the game was over. There was no assurance that the field goal would have been made, of course — an earlier attempt by Robin Ritchie hit the cross-bar, one of several "ifs" of many in a close and hard-fought game. It was a heart-breaking loss for the Tricolour and a glorious victory for the visitors.

The playoff game was the third in as many years between Queen's and McGill. The Redmen won in 1960, Queen's in 1961, and McGill this year. The only games Queen's lost this year were to McGill. They met the Redmen three times and went down to defeat three times.

In the first encounter, in Montreal, the Gaels came out on the short end of a 38-24 count. The game was tied 10-10 at the half-way mark, with Bill Edwards scoring a touchdown for Queen's and Robin Ritchie a field goal and a convert. In the third quarter McGill went ahead by two touchdowns and pulled still farther away with another major in the fourth. Queen's got two of these back, on touchdowns by Bayne Norrie and Robin Ritchie, but an intercepted forward resulted in a final touchdown for the Redmen and put the game on ice.

In the return game in Kingston the following weekend, both defences tightened up considerably. There was no scoring until the second quarter when Bill Edwards went over for a major, but McGill evened the count and it was 7-7 at half-time. Gary West put Queen's ahead by one point on a kick to the deadline, but in the fourth and final period a Queen's fumble led to a McGill T.D. and penalties killed off a last-minute drive by the Tricolour. The final score was 14-10 for the Redmen.

Although Queen's couldn't beat McGill, both Western and Toronto could and did, each registering a victory at the expense of the Redmen. So evenly matched were all four teams this year that with the schedule two-thirds completed all were tied for first place with two wins and two losses, and going into the final game of the schedule there was a chance of a four-way deadlock. However, what actually did develop was that Queen's and McGill were in first place with four wins and two losses each, and Western and Toronto followed with two wins and four losses apiece.

In the two games with Toronto, Queen's won the first one 32-13, but it took touchdowns by Bayne Norrie, Jim Young, and Gord Simester in the fourth quarter to provide that wide margin. In the return game at Kingston on November 10, the conditions were horrible — cold, wet, slippery — and the Gaels found themselves in their right element. They ran and threw forward passes and blocked and caught as if the ball and field were dry. The final score: Queen's 29, Varsity 0. Jim Young scored two touchdowns, Bill Edwards and Cal Connor one each, with Robin Ritchie racking up two converts and a field goal.

Against Western Queen's won the first encounter fairly handily 26-9, rolling up a 18-0 lead at the half. The Gaels' touchdowns were scored by Bruce Stewart, Bill Edwards and Jim Young, and Robin Ritchie converted all three and kicked a field goal and two singles.

The return game in London was a real cliff-hanger, with Queen's having the most scoring opportunities but being frustrated by a stubborn Western line. Three times the Gaels were stalled on the goal-line. They scored two touchdowns, one by Bill Sirman and one by Fred Endley, and managed to eke out a 16-13 win after stopping a Western drive within the Tricolour 20-yard line in the dying minutes of the game.

When another season rolls around no fewer than thirteen of the current Gaels will be missing: Co-captains Dave Skene and Terry Porter, Brian Todd, Kent Plumley, John Futa, and Jack Delavergne, ends; Bill Sirman, Pete Quinn, Don Plumley, John Quinn and Gary West, halfbacks; Bill Miklas and Fred Endley, guards.

Nine Queen's players were picked for the Intercollegiate all-star team, as compared to ten for McGill, five for Western, and one for Toronto. On the offensive team the Gaels placed: Jim Young, rookie backfielder who was an unanimous choice; Co-captain Terry Porter, centre; John Erickson, guard; Pete Thompson, tackle. On the defensive squad were: Kent Plumley and Pete Quinn, halves; Co-captain Dave Skene, corner linebacker; Fred Endley, inside linebacker; Marv Daub, middle guard.

The complete season's results were as follows:

and on exercise. They decided on a regime from which Sir Edward never wavered until he became too old and ill to follow it.

The life of this quiet, wise, and gentle man may not fill many pages of the annals of our history, but he deserves the grateful remembrance of all who love Canada. He tried to put into society more than he ever took out of it and always held high and steadfastly the honour of his country and faced the wind with the indomitable strength of the granite from which he was hewn.

Sir Edward Peacock

" . . . The qualities which gave him such an influential and respected position in the financial world were simple and easily recognized. He combined an exceptional clarity of intellect with an absolute integrity of conscience and an unfailing readiness to give a decision and stand by it. He was never hasty. He formed his judgment after studying and understanding clearly the issues that were at stake. But once formed, he gave it clearly and definitely. Ambiguity and obscurity had no place in Sir Edward Peacock's world. His tall and robust figure, clear eyes, and firm features were on a piece with his mind and his character, and his bell-clear and even voice matched the meat and clarity of his ideas. His mind and manner had, in the best sense, a judicial quality. Probably he would have made a great judge. In practice, he was certainly a great arbitrator — and was constantly being asked to act in this capacity on important occasions. Seriously and conscientiously though he took his many and heavy responsibilities, and hard though he worked in their discharge, he was never weighed down by them; and that, no doubt, was why he always remained younger than his years."
